on our planet, we clearly see massive obstacles for the successful implementation of the SDGs.

The evidence is unmistakable: Harmful use of alcohol is a cross-cutting obstacle for achieving the SDGs, as it adversely impacts 12 out of 17 goals.

For instance: Pervasive alcohol harm causes poverty, ill-health and premature deaths, erodes economic productivity, threatens women's empowerment and gender equality, puts the development of our children and youth into peril, contributes to unsafe public spaces and jeopardizes water and food security.

- Alcohol kills 3.3 million people worldwide every year. This represents 5.9 % of all deaths.
- Alcohol consumption causes death and disability relatively early in life. In the age group 20 to 39 years approximately 25% of total deaths are alcohol-attributable.
- Alcohol is the leading risk factor for death and disability among people aged 15 to 49 years worldwide. This is the age range in which people are typically at their most productive economically.

 There's a causal relationship between alcohol and mental health disorders, infectious diseases like TB and HIV/ AIDS and Noncommunicable diseases like cancer and heart disease.

In light of this reality and in the context of the 2017 theme of the ECOSOC High-Level Segment, IOGT International calls on governments and the UN system to take bold steps in tackling the adverse role of alcohol as a crosscutting impediment for 12 of 17 SDGs. Simply put: alcohol harm is a Human Rights and sustainable development issue. Harmful use of alcohol is a threat to our shared goal of eradicating poverty in all its forms.

Evidence-based, high-impact and cost-effective policy measures do exist that prevent and reduce alcohol harm and its burden on sustainable human development.

The so-called Three Best Buys of alcohol policy as described by World Bank, World Health Organization and World Economic Forum (among others), can help foster transformative change in our efforts to eradicate poverty and promote sustainable development.

Alcohol policy measures such as alcohol taxation, advertising bans and availability regulations should play a solid role in the global, regional, national and local efforts to achieve the SDGs.

We have the evidence. We have the policy tools. Now we need political will and leadership to take bold action for the benefit of the most deprived and vulnerable.
